

U. S. HOPES CANADA WILL GET BERGDOLL

Slacker: Escaped by Use of Fraudulent Passport Through Dominion.

MAY ASK BRITISH ACTION

Washington Reported Already to Have Made Representations to London.

Special Dispatch to THE NEW YORK HERALD.
New York Herald Bureau.

Washington, D. C., April 7.—The State Department is understood to have made representations to Great Britain concerning the extradition of Bergdoll, the draft evader, who is now in Germany. Supplementing the reported action of the State Department it is understood the American Legion is making representations to service organizations in Canada urging them to bring the Bergdoll case to the attention of their Government.

Secretary of War Weeks has announced that the entire Bergdoll matter is now in the hands of the State Department, but his declaration that "We will get Bergdoll," still stands. The basis for the reported appeal to Great Britain is that Bergdoll obtained a fraudulent passport in Canada after his escape from the United States, and it is assumed that Great Britain could get his extradition from Germany under terms of the Versailles Treaty for return to Canada. It is confidently believed that once returned to Canada that Government would turn him over to the United States as a matter of courtesy.

A suggestion of this course is believed to be contained in a letter written to Senator Capper of Kansas by Secretary Weeks concerning the Bergdoll case in which Secretary Weeks explains the difficulty in gaining possession of the person of Bergdoll by saying: "The Government of Baden refused the request (surrender of Bergdoll to Gen. Allen) on the ground that Bergdoll was not in the class of military offenders whose extradition was provided for in the terms of the armistice."

VETERANS CALLED IN WELLS DIVORCE SUIT

Comrades of 'Millionaire Sergeant' to Be Witnesses.

WARREN, Ohio, April 6.—Sixteen veterans, members of the company led in France by Thomas H. Wells, "the Millionaire Sergeant," were brought here today by Mrs. Stacia Wells to testify in the divorce proceedings brought by Wells, which Mrs. Wells is opposing.

Testimony in the case brought mention of many prominent persons, including Mrs. Sam H. Harris, wife of a theatrical producer of New York; Mr. and Mrs. French Miller of Franklin, Pa., and De Grinnin Renshaw, who was named after he had been referred to through a day of testimony as "Mr. N." Servants at the Wells home testified they had seen him embracing Mrs. Wells.

Wells, who gained his nickname as "Millionaire Sergeant" by expenditures for his company in France, has a fortune estimated at $50,000. It was testified, and an annual income of $40,000. He testified that he met Mrs. Wells, daughter of a Youngstown steel worker, when she was a manicurist in New York, and that she proposed to him. He denied that he had suffered from delirium tremens.

Wells testified that Sam Harris and Mrs. Harris sometimes had visited the Wells apartment in New York.

PLYMOUTH ROCK HOUSED.

Moved Into Brick Building With Windows Barred.

PLYMOUTH, Mass., April 7.—For the second time within four months Plymouth Rock was moved to-day. On December 21, after the canopy over the rock was torn down, the boulder was moved about fifty feet. Three guards have watched over it night and day since.

To do away with these guards the rock was moved again to-day and placed in a brick building at the corner of North and Water streets. The windows have been barred and the door securely locked.

'COUSIN EVERETT' WAS BUSY BOOSTER

Chicago Jury Digs Further Into Political Activities in Harding's Behalf.

HELPED LOWDEN OUT

Father Swore, but Always Settled His Son's Hotel and Cafe Bills.

Special Dispatch to THE NEW YORK HERALD.

CHICAGO, April 7.—The Federal Grand Jury resumed hearing to-day in its investigation of Everett Harding on charges of impersonating a Government officer. His tour to Washington was detailed by witnesses who had made the trip and other incidents in the young man's political career were sketched.

Everett's activities with the Citizens' Booster Club were also related. One morning early in the fall of 1919 Everett appeared at the headquarters in the Hotel Sherman, volunteering his services. Thereafter he appeared daily.

"He'd arrive about 7 o'clock in the morning," one of the officials explained, "and he and the janitor were the last to leave at night."

Although Everett had no assigned duties, he assumed various jobs, and when work was scarce entertained the workers and their friends by his piano playing.

One day Everett fired two stenographers. When he was called to explain his actions he said they were personal friends working free. The following day the two girls visited the management demanding their pay. One was accompanied by her father, a policeman. The management settled. Everett took a suite at the Sherman to be nearer his work. He also began to entertain extensively at the College Inn. A noticeable thing about his parties was that he always was the center.

Early that winter his interest in the Boosters' Club waned. While he continued to receive mail at their headquarters, he passed his time organizing a Young Men's Lowden League.

"Frank's a good fellow," he told some of his workers, "and he'll take care of us right. Besides he's a relative and I want to help him out."

He gave a large dinner party in the Birchmont Hotel for his associates in his Lowden campaign work. Soon afterward the Birchmont and the Sherman Hotel officials began to press him for amounts due. Everett took the shortest cut to avoid argument with them and disappeared. The police were notified and finally located him.

In the meantime members of his family were communicated with. His mother went and refused to believe. Ephraim Harding, the father, swore a little, then settled his son's debts.

"I'd like to break that young scamp's neck," he is quoted as saying. "He's never done a thing but cause me trouble."

The father also told of his son's political aspirations. Everett told his father that the "big fellows" were behind him, and were going to make him trustee of the Drainage Board. He sounded convincing. The father sanctioned his son's campaign. Everett ran, but he never caught up with the party nomination. His father paid $2,000 expenses incurred in the race.

Special Dispatch to THE NEW YORK HERALD. PROVIDENCE, April 7.—Mrs. Etta A. Searies was granted a divorce from Victor A. Searies, nephew of Edward L. Searies, wealthy recluses who died in Methuen, Mass., last August.

Mrs. Searies was allowed $100 a week for support until the entrance of the final decree of divorce, six months hence, when she is to receive a lump sum of $140,000 as alimony. The divorce was granted on the grounds of neglect to provide.

A contest started by Victor A. Searies over the will of his uncle, bequeathing his $50,000,000 estate to an employee, was settled out of court some months ago.

Special at 38.00

48.00

38.00

Wraps and Capes that express their Spring exuberance in wayward fashion—perhaps by the fascination of rows and rows of contrasting stitching or the tassels that bob about with every movement. Coats that are slim and youthful in design, depending for success upon clever pockets and belts and variations in the lines of the mode. In tricotine, men's wear serge, llama cloth, duvet de laine. Silk lined. One style pictured.

Special at 48.00

Coats and Wraps that illustrate how cleverly trimming can be used. And when braid takes unto itself the gleam of brocade, it turns a demure tuxedo coat—pictured—into an affair of distinction, assisted by a black satin sash. Surprises in the way of sleeves await you—touches of originality and distinction such as Paris uses—here in such profusion as to make selection very, very easy. In bolivia, duvet de laine, tricotine, llama cloth. Beautifully silk lined.
